DESTRUCTION OF OUR GAME

Now that the young of our wild game are just beginning to fly some of our sportsmen seem to mistake the inhuman practice of slaughtering the young fledglings for sport. In a few weeks these birds will be fit for table use and their destruction at their present tender age is not only unsportsmanlike and cruel, but it also deprives us of a luxury which may all too soon become very rare.

LAND GUIDES.

Another great boom in real estate must be in view, a land guide and an assistant have arrived. First came the dude and then the guide. We tried to keep the dude away but he came, and we never knew that the land guide was coming, or we might have sent a deputation to meet him. What his duties are, now that he has come, we are at a loss to know, unless they be to keep squatters away from the magnificent sand bed at the forks of the River. If so they have delayed too long as all the land that is fit for settlement in that locality was squatted upon long before the order forbidding settlement upon these lands was issued. Possibly he may, in after years, be able to show the farmers their much desired wood allotments. His duty cannot be, as is generally supposed, to show immigrants the indicated lands in the District, because all or very nearly all of the surveyed belt has been taken up, and the Government cannot intend to entice settlers to locate upon unsurveyed lands from which they may afterwards be ejected or compelled to pay for. The land to be surveyed will not be in the market this summer and before it is it will in all probability be gobbled up by one of the railway or colonization companies, and these having agents of their own will not need the services of the (experienced) land guide. If these guides were really a desirable class of employees, men who have been in the country for some time and who know the locality well, would have been the proper men to engage and not men entirely new to the country, who know nothing of either the locality or the land.

It is about time that the North West land force was brought to a close. What the immigrants want is not the services of land guides and other useless hangers on at the Government pay, but land itself. Why cannot the Minister of Interior either push on surveys or allow squatters on the unsurveyed lands to make a homestead entry when their location has been surveyed, whether the section be an even one or not. If the country must lose its land it would be far better for the Government to retain other lands in lieu of those thus squatted upon than to hinder the settlement of the country by a persistent endeavor to enforce a land policy which even the friends of the Government will not endorse. How long such a system is to last we cannot tell, but we know that the Territories suffered grievous wrong at the hands of both the Macdonald and the McKenzie administrations, principally because they did not understand what our requirements really were, and that now when its value has become apparent it is being used as a slaughter market for the benefit of the useless appendages and worn out hacks of a political party. Such was the use made of some of the other parts of our Dominion in earlier years and such was the course which finally forced the early settlers in Quebec and Ontario and afterwards those in Manitoba into rebellion, and unless we very much mistake the temper of the people here, the neglect with which we have been treated, together with the added insult of sending us land guides when we ask for the land itself, will start a feeling of indignation which will be more easily kindled than quenched.

WAGES IN MANITOBA.

The great "boom" experienced in Manitoba last year seems to have had a most disastrous effect upon the position of the laboring men in that Province. The collapse had to come, however, and everything is now represented as being very flat. While we have implicit confidence in the future of the country, there is no use in shutting our eyes to the fact that the immigration of certain classes of settlers has been overdone. If accounts which reach us be true—and there is every reason to believe that they are—many mechanics and laborers who came from the far East to seek their fortunes and did not find them lying around loose, are now yearning for the steady work and cheaper fare of the Eastern Provinces. The Marquette Review sounds a warning note which it would be well for those interested to heed. Our contemporary says:—

"We, as well as other journalists of the Province, should regret to publish to the outside world that we want the tide of immigration to Manitoba stopped or even checked. But it is time to let those engaged in the work of bringing or sending out large numbers of people depending on their daily labor for even the bare necessities of life, know there is a possibility of overhauling the thing. While all must acknowledge with pride, that we can give homes to millions of the deserving poor of the European countries, yet we must see to it that such a number of penniless people are not thrown on us that the public works now in progress cannot give them work. Many of those who have already arrived have been sent here, and no doubt gave their consent to the arrangement under the delusive hope that the high rate of wages that was being paid eighteen months ago was still the rule, and although we know that many of the laboring class who have arrived were working and were glad to get that work at from one shilling to eighteen pence a day; yet now that they are here and having been told by interested parties before starting that they would be able to get from eight to ten shillings a day, they refuse to work for less. It was only last week that large numbers of such parties could be seen loitering about our streets, because they refused to work on the Manitoba & Northwestern Railway at six shillings per day. These same men no doubt would have thought themselves 'well fixed' and in comfortable circumstances if they had received half that amount in the country from which they came. This may be all very well at the present, during the summer months, but what will it lead to next winter, when, of course, work will not be so plentiful, or if it is there will be plenty of our hardy young settlers now engaged in putting in their time to secure their homesteads, ready to take hold of the work to be had, and being more skilful and used to the ways of the country will naturally be preferred to the unskilful new comers."

Colonization and emigration companies should be warned as to the state of the labor market and at the same time be made to understand that suitable parties for making their way here should have at least funds sufficient to enable them to take up a homestead and pay for some plowing thereon, because although the above state of affairs does not apply directly to the North West, it will be a very easy matter to overstock the labor market in the Territories even in summer, and settlers here will be more than enough to supply the demand in winter. To those who have sufficient means to take up and cultivate homesteads, however, we have room for untold millions and only want a liberal land law to give them the best of facilities

DISSERTATION ON LOVE.

FROM THE BAD BOY.

Why He Fell Kind. How He Became a Soda Fountain. How Pa's values with you appeared hereafter.

"Well, how's your eye?" said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he blew in with the wind on the day of the cyclone, and left the door open. "Say, what that door. You want to blow every thing out of the store? Had any more rights protecting girls from duels?"

"No, everything is quiet so far. I guess I have got a record as a fighter, the boys will be careful who they insult when I am around. But I had the hardest week I ever experienced, jerking soda for the Young Men's Christian Association, said the boy, as he peeled a banana.

"What do you mean, boy? Don't cut any reflections on such a noble Association. They don't drink, do they?"

"Think! Oh, no! They don't drink anything intoxicating, but when it comes to soda they fool themselves. You know there has been a National Convention of delegates from all the young Men's Christian Associations of the whole country, about three hundred here, and our store is right on the street where they passed four times a day, and I never saw such appetites for soda. There has been one continual fizz in our store since Wednesday. The boss wanted me to play it on some of them by putting some brandy in with the perfunctory few times, but I wouldn't do it, I guess a few weeks ago, before I had led a different life I wouldn't have to be asked twice to play the game on anybody. But a man can buy soda of me and be perfectly safe. Of course, if a man winks when I ask him what flavour he wants and says 'neuter mind,' I know enough to put in brandy. That is different. But I wouldn't congregate it into a man for nothing. This Christian Association's convention has caused a coldness between pa and me though."

"How's that? Your pa isn't jealous, is he?" and the grocery man came around from behind the counter to get the latest gossip to retail to the hired girls who trade with him.

"Jealous nothing," said the boy as he took a few rains out of a box. "You see, the delegates were shuffled out to all the church members to take care of, and they dealt two to me, and she never told pa anything about it. They came to supper the first night, and pa didn't get home, so when they went to the convention in the evening he gave them a night key, and pa came home from the boxing match about eleven o'clock, and the boss was asleep. Just as pa got most of his clothes off he heard somebody fumbling at the front door, and he thought it was burglars. Pa has got nerve enough, when he is on the inside of the house and the burglars are on the outside. He opened a window and looked out and saw two suspicious looking characters trying to pick the lock with a skeleton key, and he picked up a new sloop jar that ma had bought when we moved, covered all, and dropped it down right between the two delegates. Gosh, if it had hit one of them there would have been the solemnest funeral you ever saw. Just as it struck they got the door opened and came in the hall, and the wind was blowing pretty hard and they thought a cyclone had taken the cupola of the house. They were talking about being miraculously saved, and trying to strike a match on their wet pants, when pa went to the head of the stairs and pushed over a wire stand filled with potted plants, which struck pretty near the delegates, and one of them said the house was coming down sure, and they better go into the cellar, and they went down and got behind the furnace. Pa called me up and wanted me to go down cellar and tell the burglars we were out to them, and for them to get out, but I wasn't very well, so pa locked his door and went to bed. I guess it must have been half an hour before pa could get move for her life, cause there were two of the savagest looking burglars that ever was, rumaging over the house. Ma smelled pa's breath to see if he had been drinking again, and then she got up and hid her ornate watch in her shoes, and her Onalaska diamond ear-ring where she said no burglars would ever find them, and pa and ma laid awake till daylight, and then pa said he went to bed, and he and ma went down cellar. Pa stood on the bottom stair and looked around, and one of the delegates said, Mister is the storm over, and is your family safe. Why, its one of the delegates. What you doing down there, and pa said 'what's a delegate?' and then pa explained it. And pa apologized, and the delegate said it was no matter, as they had enjoyed them selves real well in the cellar. Ma was merciful most to death, but the delegates told her it was all right. She was mad at pa, first, but when she saw the broken sloop jar on the front steps, and the potted plants in the hall, she wanted to kill pa, and I guess she would only for the society of the delegates. She couldn't help telling pa he was a bald headed old fool, but pa didn't retaliate. He is too much of a gentleman to talk back in company. All he said was that a woman who is old ought to have delegates sawed off on her right to have sense enough to tell her husband, and then they all drifted off into conversation about the convention and the boxing match, and everything was all right on the surface, but after breakfast, when the delegates went to the convention, I noticed pa went right down town and bought a new sloop jar, and some more plants. Pa and ma didn't speak all the forenoon, and I guess they wouldn't up to this time, only ma's boss not come home from the milliners, and she had to have some money to pay for it. Then she called pa 'pet' and that settled it. When ma calls pa 'pet' that is twenty-five dollars. Dear old darling means fifty dollars. But say those young men do a heap of good, don't they? Their presence seems to make people better. Some boys down by the store were going to tie a can on a dog's tail yesterday, and somebody said here comes the Christian Association, and those bad boys let the dog go. They tried to find the dog after the crowd had got by, but the dog knew his business. Well, I must go down and charge the soda fountain for a picnic that is expected from the country."

"Hold on a minute," said the grocery man, as he wound a piece of brown paper around a cob and stuck it in a syrup jug he had just filled for a customer, and then flicked his fingers. "I want to ask you a question. What has caused you to change so from being bad? You were about as bad as they make 'em, up to a few weeks ago, and now you seem to get in your work doing good about as well as any boy in town. What is it that ails you?"

"O, sugar, I don't want to tell," said the boy, as he blushed, and giggled around on one foot, and looked silly. But if you won't laugh I will tell you. It is my girl that has made me good. It may be only temporary. If she goes back on me I may be tuff again, but if she continues to hold out faithful I shall be a doing all the time. Say, did you ever love a girl? It would do you good. If you love anybody, regular old fashioned, the way I do, people could teach little children here to trade, and you wouldn't.

Pains of any wilted vegetables on to them, or give them short weight. If you was in love, and felt that the one you loved saw every act of yours, and you could see her eyes every minute, you would throw away anything that was spoiled and not try to sell it, for fear you would offend her. I don't think any man fits to do business honestly, unless he is in love, or has been in love once. Now I couldn't do anything wrong if I tried, because I should bear the still small voice of my girl saying to me 'Hemmy, sell up on that.' I slipped up on a banana peel yesterday, and hurt myself, and I was just going to say something awful, and I could see my girl's bangs rise right up, and there was a pained look in her face, and a tear in her eye, and by gosh, I just smiled and looked tickled till her hair went down and the smile came back again to her lips, though it hurt me like blazes where I struck the sidewalk. I was telling pa about it and asked him if he ever felt as though his soul was going right out towards somebody, and he said he did once on a steamboat excursion, but he cut a lemon and got over it. Pa thinks it is my liver, and wants me to take pills, but I tell you, boss, it has struck in me too deep for pills, unless it is one that weighs about a hundred and forty pounds and wears a hat with a feather on. Say, if my girl should walk right into a burning lake of red hot lava, and besoken me to follow, I would take a hop, skip and jump, and—

"O, give us a rest," said the grocery man, as he took a basin of water and sprinkled the floor, preparatory to sweeping out. "You have got the worst case I ever saw, and you'll better get out and walk around a block, and the boy went out and forgot to hang out any sign."

The union question will be taken up at the Maritime Provinces Methodist Conference at Yarmouth, N. S. Both parties anticipate a close vote.

CANNIBALS AND CORK LEGS.

Greatest results are expected from an experiment recently tried by the American Missionary in the Canibal Islands, a brother who had lost both arms and both legs in a railroad accident. He was provided with cork limbs, and his eyes being in good condition, it was believed he could get in his work with the faithful as well as though he was a whole man. The idea was to allow the cannibals to kill him and eat him, believing that the heathen would see the error of their ways and swear off on human flesh.

A report has been received which is very encouraging. It seems that the cannibals killed the good missionary, and cut off his arms and legs for a sort of stew or, 'boys', thus falling directly into the trap set for them by the missionary society. The missionary stationed at the next town, who furnished the society with the data, says it was the most laughable thing he ever witnessed, to see the heathen chew on those cork limbs. They boiled them all day and night, keeping up a sort of a go-as-you-please walk around, or fresh meat dance, and giving a sacred concert about like our national 'Whooop it up, Liza Jane,' and when they stuck a fork into the boiling limbs, and found that the 'meat' seemed water soaked, they set the table and sounded the loud timbrel for breakfast.

The surviving missionary says he shall never forget the look of pain on the face of a buck cannibal as he hit into the elbow joint of the late lamented and struck a brass hinge. He picked it out as an American would pick a backshot out of a piece of venison, and laid it beside his plate in an abstracted manner, and began to chew on the cork elbow. Any person who has ever tried to draw a cork out of a beer bottle with his teeth can realize the feelings of these cannibals as they tried to draw sustenance from the remains of the cork man. They were saddened, and it is safe to say they are incensed against the missionary society.

Whether they will conclude that all Americans have become tough, and quit trying to masticate them, is not known, though that is the object sought to be attained by the society. One of the cannibals said he knew when those legs and arms would not stay under water when they were boiling, and had to be loaded down with stones, that the meat wasn't right, but his wife told him, some pork would do so.

The experiment is worth following up, and we suppose hereafter there will be a great demand for men with cork arms and legs to be sent as missionaries. After a few such experiences the cannibals may see the error of their ways and become Christians and eat dog sausage and Lamb-burg cheer.

CLOVER

"I regret that it is impossible for me to be in 'clover' with you to-morrow. A wonderful thing is clover. It means honey and cream; that is to say, industry and contentment; that is to say, the happy bees in perfumed fields, and at the cottage gate Old Bos, the bountiful, serenely chewing satisfaction's cud, in that blessed twilight pause, that like a benediction falls between all toil and sleep. The clover makes me dream of happy hours of childhood's ray cheeks, of dimpled babies of wholesome loving wires of honest men—of springs and brooks and violets, and all there is of stainless joy in peaceful human life. A wonderful word is clover. Drop 'C' and you have the happiest of mankind. Take away the 'C' and 'V' and you have the only things that make a heaven of this dull and barren earth. Out of the 'r' alone, and there remains a warm, deceitful bud that sweetens breath and keeps the flame in countless homes whose masters frequent clubs. After all, Bottom was right: 'Good hay, sweet, has no fellow.' The 'Lapsed' regrets to the Clover Club.

OUR BOY IN BLUE.

I Told You So.

At the Pullman races, on June 22nd, Hudson added another to his volume of selling victories, this time winning handsomely against a formidable field of fifteen runners, nearly all of national repute, and all of whom unquestionably speeded the race to the finish. The victory of the race took place on Lake Calumet, at the village of Pullman, a three mile punt with a turn. The large number of entries necessitated three preliminary heats. Hudson, who took second place proved to be the only man who possessed the capacity of crowding Hudson to the final race. Hudson passed the line in 22 min. 20 sec.; Homer 22 sec. In the double wheel race, Hudson and Lee took first place. Homer and McKay coming in second twenty six seconds later.
